

Longniddry

EXPLORE EAST LOTHIAN BY TRAIN

East Lothian Community Rail Partnership link railway services and their communities

Opened in 1846, the station also acted as a junction for Haddington, which closed to goods traffic in 1968. A timetable in 1847 showed two daily stopping trains to London, including an overnight service. The old branch line to Haddington is now a footpath. Trains serving Aberlady and Gullane then diverged just east of Longniddry. Following closure of the signal box, notable for an ingenious mailbag switch device still in use in the 1970s, the entire station was moved eastwards 50 yards.

It's a short walk to Longniddry Bents, ideal for the John Muir Way, beach walking and wildlife watching with views up the Forth and across to Fife. The Gosford Estate is close by with a well-preserved designed landscape with woodland walks, lakes and follies. Along the coast is Aberlady Nature Reserve outstanding for its birdlife. The disused branchline is an ideal offroad route to the historic county town of Haddington.

eastlothiancrp.org.uk

East Lothian Scenic Line